Introduction

2020 was a challenging year for both global and Australian sport, however rather than dwell on the past, let’s look forward to how sport will recover in 2021.

At YouGov Sport, we are pleased to offer a helping hand in this regard.

As the sports and entertainment specialist arm of YouGov, we ask Australians every day about their views, attitudes and behaviours around sport, on specific teams and leagues and – since the outbreak of COVID-19 – about sports fans’ views on that too.

And we’re happy to share some of our insights with you in the shape of this special report.
The impact of Covid-19 on Australian sport

SOME UNPRECIDENTED CHALLENGES

› No games, no crowds and amended fixtures for large parts of 2020 across all major Australian sports.

› Australian Grand Prix cancelled hours before first practice session.

› Loss in revenues felt at all levels of sport with all major rights holders and clubs standing down staff and cutting back on all expenditure on and off the field.

› 5 day state-wide lockdown during 2021 Australian Open.

BUT THE AUSTRALIAN FANS APPETITE FOR SPORT WAS UNWAVERED

› 2020 State of Origin Game III, Suncorp Stadium – largest attendance at any live sport around the world at that point in time since Covid-19 outbreak.

› The first ever night time AFL Grand Final gave Seven Network their highest ever prime time network share.

› Kayo grew by 78% compared to previous year with 624,000 paying customers as of the end of calendar year 2020.

› Kyrgios vs Theim at the 2021 Australian Open was the largest non-news event of the year at the time with an audience of 1.8m.

Methodology and sample
Methodology

The data used for this analysis was taken from the YouGov Australian panel. The project was run from March 1st – March 3rd 2021. The project consisted of two screener questions and ten core survey questions specific to Covid-19 and its impact on Australian sport.

Who did the project target?

The project included a screener question asking respondents what their level of interest was towards sports in general. Respondents who identified as having any level of interest in sport (2-4) were included in the study. A follow up question was then provided asking the same question specific to key Australian sports leagues. Core fans is our primary ‘sports audience’.
